A word and opinion on Kennel Cough from Dr. Andrew Jones, DVM, Canada.

Worth mentioning for all the dog folks out there. Here's what Dr. Andrew Jones, DVM mentioned in a recent e-mail.

"It's a combination of a Virus (Influenza) and a Bacteria called bordetella. The signs are a sudden onset of a 'goose honking' cough, that often then leads to retching because of sooo much coughing. MOST dogs are still alert- eating and drinking. I have seen a few older dogs that have developed pneumonia as a result - BUT that is because they are older and don't have a fully functioning immune system. And the TREATMENT is....Well that depends on who you see. Many Veterinarians, including myself in my earlier days- will INSTANTLY prescribe antibiotics. BUT if your dog is young, and still alert, including eating and drinking, AND has clear lung sounds, then these are NOT needed. NO antibiotics..WHY? Think of it like you having a Cold. If it is a virus, antibiotics WON'T do anything. The disease has to run it's course. BUT what can I do? 1. We do not know if it is viral or bacterial- BUT it will run it's course. If your dog is bright and alert, and eating and drinking, then she can be treated at home. 2. Give your pet an immune boost- add in chopped FRESH Garlic to their diet- 1 clove per 40lbs 3. You can mix Eucalyptus Essential Oil in a vaporizer- and leave in the room a few feet from where your pet is sleeping. 4. Here is a New Herbal Combination for Coughing Dogs with Kennel Cough:

1 part Coltsfoot, 1 part Elecampane, 1 part Mullein, 1 part Yarrow, 1 part marshmallow. ----Mix the tinctures together- and dose at 1ml per 40lbs, 3 times daily for 3-5 days. This formula will EASE spasmodic coughing, soothe irritated mucous membranes, and give the immune system a boost in fighting the infection." Dr. Andrew Jones, DVM
